

Jeff Chen

National Hydrocephalus Foundation is pleased to introduce and announce Jefferson (Jeff) Chen, to our Medical Advisory Board.

Dr. Chen is originally from Pasadena (California). He was an undergrad at Caltech and went onto the Medical School at Johns Hopkins. Dr. Chen's residency training in neurosurgery was at UC San Diego. From there, he had his fellowship training in neurovascular/skull base neurosurgery at the Barrows Neurological Institute. From there, Dr. Chen spent 5 years on the academic staff at the University of Texas, Galveston. For 15 years he lived in Portland, Oregon and had a private practice with an emphasis on neurotrauma, brain tumors, and NPH. Due to the growth and need of his NPH patients, Dr. Chen started an active NPH program and ran a support group for these patients.

For almost a year now, Dr. Chen has been with UCI Medical Center in Irvine, California. His goals are to build a multispecialty NPH program with an emphasis on the use of new techniques/devices to improve patient care. He also wishes to build a basic research program directed at the molecular mechanisms of cell (neuronal) injury.

Dr. Chen is married and has two children. His son is a medical student and his daughter has a Master's degree in Public Health. Dr. Chen's entire family has been very involved in his work and dedication. They have assisted him with his NPH support groups and NPH walks in Oregon.

We welcome Dr. Chen to our Medical Advisory Board!
